

IN CASE OF OVERDOSE

1.

Know your legal rights.

Under the Good Samaritan law, you are legally protected from arrest for helping someone during a drug overdose.

Try to wake them.

Call their name and shake their shoulders. Do not slap.

3.

If they don't respond...

If they are not breathing...

give a couple of rescue breaths.

5.

Use Naloxone following the instructions from the auto-injector.

- Continue rescue breaths until person is breathing.
- Turn them on their side.
- Stay with them until EMT's arrive.

REMEMBER

YOU CANNOT HARM A PERSON
BY GIVING THEM NALOXONE.

LEAVING JAIL?

If you use opioids, your risk of overdose is at its highest in the weeks following your release from jail. Opioids slow your respiratory system and can cause you to stop breathing. This happens because your tolerance gets lower while you're in jail. It is best not to use again, but if you do...

- Don't use alone - if you're alone and you stop breathing, you're dead.
- Don't combine opioids with alcohol or other drugs.
- Don't use an opioid from an unknown source.
- Use a smaller amount than you did before.
- Carry Naloxone and make sure your friends and family know where you store it and how to use it.

OVERDOSE SIGNS

- Unconscious or unable to waken.
- Not responsive to pain.
- Slow or shallow breathing, or breathing difficultly such as choking or snorting sound.
- Lips and fingernails turning blue, cool or clammy skin.
- Small pupils.
- Slow heart rate.
