TMS is a non-invasive procedure that works by passing gentle magnetic pulses across the surface of the head. These pulses stimulate certain areas of the brain and improve symptoms of many diseases. In general, lower frequency pulses calm brain activity, and are used in conditions such as anxiety, OCD, ADD and insomnia, while higher frequency pulses increase brain activity and are used in conditions like depression, addictions, Long-COVID symptoms and mental performance. These stimulations have a significant positive impact in the vast majority of people that use TMS when performed for the length of time suggested by the requesting physician.

“ I am a different person from the day I walked into the clinic... TMS was amazing. ~ D.P. ”
